

THE WEDDING

The Wedding

Bright white light filled every nuisance of space.

And screams and anguish of souls could be heard in the far distance.

You could hear voices of people gasping or covering their mouths, trying not to scream.

The horrible voices of evil were everywhere.

The people flung themselves against the cold boulders and mountains, trying not to be seen by the evil monsters of hell that were patrolling the area.

The people could see nothing.

There was complete darkness on the earth and only one little flickering star in the heavens, which was the star they were following.

The evil beasts were passing by because of the stench of hell.

Their eyes were like snake eyes, some of the people looked at the beasts and fear overcame the people and they died and fell off the cliffs and mountains into the slime that was now the water on the earth.

The evil beasts didn't look for the people who had fallen, because another patrol would grab them.

As that thought was in the front evil beast, the opening of an old and rusty door could be heard.

The evil beasts yelled out in pleasure as they heard the people who had fallen off the mountains began to scream with horror as the chains were being wrapped over them by the other evil beasts and dragged into hell's fire.

This fire reached to the mountains' cliffs and hills where the other people were.

The evil beasts were so enjoying the horror and pain the people were now experiencing, that will be a billion fold in eternity in the lake of fire.

The leader of the people, who were pinned on the mountain with a group of people, was holding a child onto the mountain.

The leader was trying to get the people to the area of the last light on earth.

She was perplexed that the evil ones did not see them on the mountains and cliffs.

She had forewarned the people some would not make it to the last star.

She told the people it would be very dangerous and the least movement at any time could cause the evil ones to discover them and kill them.

They were tired, scared, weary and fatigued.

They had no food for months, but their strength was not abated.

Each step of the journey, they were being fought for, as homes crumbled, buildings blew up, earthquakes occurred everywhere, tsunamis and freezing temperatures in all parts of the world, as they saw the sun and moon turned to blood and fell away.

The horror was all over the earth, as all time pieces stopped and hand dials and numbers disappeared.

The little boy she was holding onto the mountain, was about to go home after school, when he saw something in the sky. He was frightened; people began to scream and his mother, who was his teacher, ran out of the school building, holding his brother in her arms.

She was looking at the sky and so was the baby she was holding.

The boy, whose heart was racing, slowly turned back to look at the sky and he quickly turned to grab his mother.

When he looked, she was not there, nor was his baby brother.

Then the thunder and hail began to fall.

Then fire began to come forth out of the ground.

The boy screamed and began to run wildly with the other people.

He was running by a shop and he remembered his mother always told him, "If you have nothing else, have water."

The little eight year old boy ran into the shop and tried to pull the whole container of water down, when he realized it was too heavy for him.

A man running pass saw the little boy and ran into the shop. The little boy thought to help, but the man grabbed the container and ran out.

The little boy in shock, stood in the doorway looking out into the mass crowds of people running and screaming.

The boy slowly began to enter the street. Then the people began to look back.

The boy stood still and slowly turned his head and looked back.

There were towers of fire rolling behind the people.

The boy stood there paralyzed.

A hand grabs the little boy by his collar, snatches him up, and runs back into the store and hid behind a stone fire pit. A little girl saw them and ran to the door of the store and was peeping in after them.

The little girl looked to be around eight years old.

She was a mulatto with brown hair which was parted down the middle with two plaits and she had brown eyes; the same color of her hair.

She wore a light blue sleeveless dress.

The little boy saw her but was too afraid to say anything.

The little girl stood out because this was a dusty poverty stricken village.

The little girl was dressed simple, but expensive.

The hand that snatched the little boy was a strange missionary who came to the village nearly two weeks before and told the people of Jesus.

It had been a very terrible two weeks.

She had been rebuked, raped, beaten and jailed.

But the little boy's mother heard the words of Jesus and accepted Him last night.

Even though the little boy was sitting in the dusty school and listened, he simply shook his head trying to shake out of his thoughts what the woman was telling his mother about an approaching dooms day and eternal hell fire; and that a loving God had prepared a way to escape the evil and that was to accept His free gift, His Son as their redeemer.

The woman would walk home with the baby on her back and holding her son's hand.

He would look up at her because he saw a distant look in her eyes and knew his mother was thinking about this spirit God who as, Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

He would glaze up at his mother until she felt him looking at her; then she would shake his hand and give him a weary smile.

The woman was trying to keep her and the little boy out of the path of fire, when the little girl looking directly at them stepped into the doorway, as the fire past over the two of them.

Both the woman and the little boy screamed.

They looked up where the little girl was, but she was gone.

Everything was burning.

The two could not move.

Fear and terror had gripped them.

A hard bolt of thunder clapped in the air and the two of them began to scream.

In the midst of the street, the little girl began to walk in the midst of the fire and destruction; and as she walked, she transformed into a winged holy male angel.

He walked to the group of holy angels that were in the midst of the fire.

He said, "They are well."

One angel said, "Very good."

Another angel said, "They have to meet up with the remnant."

The holy angels could hear the woman and boy screaming.

The angel who said, "They have to meet the remnant," shook his head towards them and said, "Go and get them started on this journey."

The one angel walked to the place where the shop door was and had his back to the two.

Because all of them was looking into the spiritual realm and saw the evil creatures began to ascend up to the earth.

The main two angels began to look through the earth and saw the holy angels ushering the remnant that would be saved and accept Jesus to the point where God and Jesus said they had to be.

The woman and the little boy were shaking and holding onto each other.

The angel, having his hands on the top of the fire pit, was looking over at the two and said, "Let's go."

The little boy looked at the screaming woman and said, "Huh?"

The woman, who was screaming and crying, composed herself for a second to hear the voice of a child.

She said, "I'm saved Jesus; why did I get left here?"

She screams, "No!!!!"

The other angels were standing in the midst of nothing, looking at the woman and the little boy.

The woman was devastated and rolling from one end of the fire pit to the next end of the fire pit.

The little boy sat on his knees and watched the woman, until he started patting on her and she was so far gone, until the little boy grabbed her by her sweatshirt and began to shake her.

She stopped screaming and crying.

The angel said, "Get up and stop crying. You have work to do."

The woman, lying on the ground, looked up at the little boy and both slowly turned and looked at the angel who was standing over them.

They fainted.

In the same instance, the angel said, "Let's go"

This revived both of them.

They saw the other angels standing and waiting for them.

They heard babies and children crying.

The angel said, "You hear them, they are waiting for the two of you. Let's go."

The woman and the little boy slowly got up and struggled to walk.

When they walked over to the other angels, the angels towered above them.

A holy angel walked up and he said, "My name is Thumrl. Our purpose is to get the remnant before the wedding feast. It will be very dangerous and difficult for you. You will be tested to your core."

The woman said, "I'm saved."

You could hear the heart brokenness in her.

She could not finish her sentence because the feeling of unworthiness and failure kept her from the rapture.

Now she is doomed.

The angels looked at her and one of the angels said, "You would have been doomed, if you had not obeyed His last warning not to hate, but to come to Africa and bring in His harvest."

The little boy looked at the sobbing woman.

Thumrl said, "Let's go."

The woman and the little boy began to stumble and walk over the dirt road and both of them thought and spoke out, "Where?"

Thumrl said, "To the place of the last star. Follow the last star."

The angels disappeared.

The woman and the little boy were walking because the earth had begun to grow dark very fast.

The woman, holding the little boy's hand said, "Began to say the 23rd Psalm."

Evil spirits began to populate on the earth and tried running toward them to attack the woman and the boy.

But the woman would yell, "Jesus!" and the evil spirits would run away screaming.

The woman was rebuking a group of evil spirits so hard, she did not see the star piercing out of the darkness.

In the blackness of the sky, one lonely star remains.

The little boy was jumping one way and another, squatting, peeping and looking for evil spirits, who were loosed on the earth.

God's children were gone and the evil ones were free.

Some of them were free; some were still bound by the prayers of the saints.

The little boy finally jumped until he saw the star.

The evil ones started snatching on the woman's arm.

She bent over trying to pick up a rock or dirt or something to throw at the evil spirits that were trying not to be bound.

She didn't understand why.

The boy pointed at the star.

The evil spirit was watching the boy and looked up and saw the last star and ran off.

The woman knew that evil spirit would go to tell the rest of the evil spirits.

She dropped to her knees and pulled the boy down onto his knees.

She prayed, "Father God, You know what you are doing.

Help me to believe and trust you. Help me to do your will, so I can be with you and Jesus and bring all these to Christ.

The angel nodded his head.

The woman said, "Father, stop that evil spirit from going telling the others where we are going. I know we are to go through a lot, but I know - not my will, but yours."

God told Thuml, "Stop him".

Thumrl disappeared.

The other angels could hear the screams of the evil spirit.

The two stood up and began to walk.

They could hear cries and screams of children. They both thought it was their imaginations.

One of the angels said, "You both can't have the same imaginations. Look over to your left."

The woman and boy looked to the left and said, "How can we see anything?"

The angels walked over to lighten up the area so the woman and little boy could see.

Thumrl returned and walked next to another angel and stood.

The woman and little boy ran to the seventeen children and began to hold them and comfort them.

The woman held them for a very long time.

One child was three and the woman was baffled.

She looked up to heaven and said silently, "God, You know why."

The woman told the children, "This is the end of time.

Nothing will be made anew. You are here, and this is just the very beginning."

The only way to get out of this evil which leads to hell and eternal damnation, is to accept Jesus Christ, as the Son of God who came in the flesh and shed His blood to redeem us."

One boy about sixteen said, "Who are you? You are here too?"

The woman said, "You are right. But I am the last hope for your salvation. This is the way God made and I will tell everyone Jesus is the Son of God and He only can give your eternal life by confessing your sins and believing on Jesus to save you."

She leaned over in the face of the three year old and said, that means you too little man."

They heard a woman screaming and calling out, "Jeremiah!!" Jeremiah jumps up in the woman's lap and began to scream, "Mama, Mama, Mama."

The angels shone light and the woman had a candle stick and put the candle out and saw Jeremiah and shone the light in her face so Jeremiah could see her.

And they grabbed each other.

They held onto each and cried.

A group of fifty people were standing with the woman.

But the woman was Jeremiah's aunt who raised him for the past six months because her sister, her sister's husband and their three children were all killed in a mud slide.

As they sat in the darkness, one man called out, "Stephano!!! My god, my son!"

Stephano jumped up and said, "Dad, is that you?"

The man jumped up.

The little candle stick which was going fast, shone the light on his son.

His son was the one who asked the woman earlier why she was here.

They ran and embraced each other.

They held each other and cried.

The boy said, "I'm sorry Dad for making fun of mommy and Paula. Where are they, as he looked around?"

The father grabbed his son's face and said, "They are not here, but gone!!"

The boy said, "Where?"

The people all turned and looked at the woman and even the little boy who was sitting by her, looked at her.

They heard more people screaming.

The woman jumped up and said, "I rebuke you devil in Jesus' name. Leave them alone and get out of here forever!"

The people were running and ran into the small group. The woman told the children they were going to follow the star.

She explained to them the rapture

She told them that they must make it to the star within three days, so Jesus can take them out of the earth into eternity.

The woman sat and explained salvation and the victory Jesus gave to us forever.

She told them the devil and all his evil forces would try to stop them from reaching the star, and some would not accept Jesus, but succumb to the wilds of Satan to deceive and trick others to fall.

The woman said let's pray.

One man said, "Why pray to your God, because He got us into this? I'll pray to my God."

The woman said to him, "You will not call up that devil here. You go your way. Leave us!"

The man said fine, "Stephano, come."

They left the group.

The woman prayed the prayer of salvation.

Some accepted.

Then they heard the screams of the man and his son
Stephano.

They all jumped up.

They heard Stephano scream.

The woman said, "All of you stand still."

She ran down the street and began to scream, "Jesus,
Jesus, Jesus!"

The angel shone enough light for her to see a figure.

It was Stephano's dad running.

The woman grabbed him by his arm and said, "Only one time."

The man pulled away.

The woman looked back in the direction of dead screams and then up to heaven.

She returned to the group and everyone was puzzled - why the child was taken by evil spirits and not the father?

The woman fell on her knees and quietly said, "God, please let your presence remain all through this area as a sanctuary for those who will go through the tribulation so they can accept Jesus as Savior."

The little boy walked over and putting his hand on the woman's shoulder said, "I'm hungry."

The woman said, "Can you'll hold on for three days?"

Stephano's dad was still crying.

The woman sat next to him and said nothing.

Jeremiah's aunt said, "Let's go. I don't like being here."

The woman said, "We will move when my God and Jesus say move. Remember the children of Israel?"

They all said, "No."

The woman told them the story of how God told the Jews to move."

Thumrl and another angel were watching as the other angels were drawing other people to where the woman and sixty seven people were gathered.

There were more than seven hundred gathered at that point. Many had their children with them.

Some had friends and family that had been raptured.

Now the truth was beginning to beat down on the people, of what their family and friends were telling of Jesus.

One man tried to commit suicide, but they stopped him and he said he wanted to go and be with his father and children.

The woman told him, "If you killed yourself before you accept Jesus as Savior, you will go to hell. Once you accept Jesus as Savior, you don't want to die, but live. We must make it to that star in three days. If we don't, we will be here and go through the great tribulation."

The people began to murmur and say, "What is the great tribulation?"

The woman began to tell the people of the great tribulation and His grace, He gives to all of them. All, including herself, was given a second chance.

She told them, "I am making it to that star!"

The little eight year old boy said, "Me too!"

A few of the people started walking in the direction to the star.

Several people started running to the star.

The angels previewed the area.

Several angels were left to destroy any evil spirits, because God was honoring the woman's prayers for deliverance for the people of the tribulation period.

The sun was hidden by the moon all day.

At least what the people thought.

The woman and the boy were standing hand in hand with the group.

They could hear other voices and movement in the distant, but dared not say anything.

Then someone let out a blood curling scream.

Everyone jumped in fear.

The angels looked on.

The other people began to say, "What!!!!"

The women, who had her three- year old nephew, who was screaming, dropped to her knees, screaming and holding the little boy who had began to scream because of his aunt.

Everyone started looking around and noticed a little light in the area and then everyone was happy when they all looked up at the black sky and saw the sun had moved from behind the moon.

The thought, "Hope."

They could hear other voices that were mumbling.

They knew it was the voices of evil!

They could hear humans running and trying to hide under the little light.

The woman was mumbling trying to remember the book of Revelation.

Her bible was confiscated the moment she stepped onto the airplane to Africa.

She rolled her eyes at the flight attendant and the security forces and looking out the airplane window up to heaven said to God, "Right."

Heavily sighing, she handed them her bible and computer, but she had previously printed the entire bible and hid it in her shoes.

She knew they would take her bible, as God showed her in a dream.

As the woman was remembering the scriptures, she looked up at the darkened sky and picking up the eight -year old, she began to run.

The angels watched in surprise.

As the people were looking at the woman, other people were running and started running with the woman.

The group of people who had gathered with the Christian woman, even though they were mentally torn and stressed, knew for her to run, something was about to happen.

The teenage boy's (who was lost in darkness forever) father was bending over and trying to get the woman and her nephew up as they saw the woman running with the eight year old in her arms.

Then a great blast took place in the sky and the entire earth shook.

Everyone, and those running with her, slowly turned and looked up at the sky.

The mumbling voices of the evil ones started screaming.

As the blast continued to reach the earth, the moon and sun slowly began to drip away in blood.

The Christian woman knew the earth will be totally black and they had to reach that star in three day, per the angels' instructions.

No one knew the time anymore.

The hands of the clock on all timepieces had disappeared.

No one knew how long it had been since the rapture.

The Christian woman knew she had better run as fast as she could.

She had spent a lot of time praying and asking God to forgive her of disobedience and waiting so long to come to Africa to share the word of life through Jesus' redemption of man.

She was screaming out the name of Jesus as she ran.

The evil ones would fall back.

The little boy who was hugging her neck with all his might.

He saw that each time she screamed the name of Jesus, the devils ran away.

So he began to scream, "Jesus! Jesus!"

He noticed the devils did not run under his voice.

He patted the woman on her back and asked, "Why?"

The first group of people began to run after the Christian woman and large groups of people began to emerge, running and screaming.

They were so tired and so afraid.

The woman was tired.

The little boy was tired.

No one knew how far they had run, or how long they had been running.

The angels stepped out of the spiritual realm and secured the area as a haven for all those who the Lord God will lead there for the great tribulation.

The devils became mad and tried to attack the holy angels.

The holy angels bound them up with nets and chains and slung them into the deep darkness.

The Christian woman was so very tired that she was falling to her knees and gasping for air.

When the aunt of the three year old said, "This is from your God! Look and see."

The Christian woman said, "I can't see. See what?"

She said, "You have witnessed this day or whatever day this is, that every prophesy have been fulfilled.

You are left here - today - because you did not believe the truth."

The aunt screamed at the woman and began hitting the ground.

The aunt said, "What truth?!!!!"

The Christian woman said, "That Jesus has come in the flesh and He is the only Son of the Living God, who God sent into the world to save us."

The people yelled in one accord and in one voice, "Why are you here if you believe that?"

The little boy looked at the woman.

The Christian woman said, "Look around you. Where are your loved ones and friends and neighbors who believed in Jesus and accepted Him as their Savior and God?"

The people grew silent.

The Christian woman said, "They believe the testimony of Jesus Christ and they are with Him. Where are their bodies? They disappeared with Him into eternity."

The Christian woman sighed.

She said, "Why am I here with you? Because the same love ones, friends, and neighbors pray to God that He would send hope. Send someone who can tell you about Jesus."

The Christian woman said, "That person is me."

She sighed.

The very large group of people realized she was very angry for being left.

A few men began to speak.

One waded through the crowd and said with fear and trembling, "I want to see my brother. He told me about this Jesus, but that's not religion. I now know that his God is the real God and I want to be with him and accept Jesus as my Savior."

Jesus standing in a heavenly place and was watching the people.

He turned and looked at the star that was dimming.

Jesus said to Thumrl, "Move the people."

The man fell to his knees crying and said, "Please?"

Many people fell to their knees crying and said to the Christian woman, "Save us, so we can leave this place!"

The Christian woman said, "I cannot save."

They all looked at her.

She continued, "I have prayed for a very long time that God would send workers so God will have a great harvest here, but I just didn't know it would be me."

The Christian woman sighed again.

It shamed the people.

The angels looked at the Christian woman.

One angel said to the others, "She must let go of her condemnation to lead them to Jesus."

Jesus said, "Yes."

Thumrl whispered to the Christian woman, "The star."

She turned and looked at the star and shaking, yelled to the people, "We must get to that star."

She turned to began walking.

Some people took a step to go with her.

Many were on their knees and grieving.

Her heart smote her and she turned and dropping on her knees, began to pray for the very large group of people.

She asked God for their protection, deliverance and for them to accept Jesus Christ as His only way to redeem man.

She told the people to ask God to forgive them of their sins.

She heard some people started listing their sins.

The angels looked at those people.

The Christian woman very gently led them back to the prayer.

Thumrl smiled at the woman and the people.

Jesus said to Thumrl, "Give her the warning."

Thumrl whispered to the Christian woman.

The Christian woman said to the large group of new Believers, "I tell you a truth - don't look, nor desire evil things in your heart. If you do, you will go into hell. Jesus can deliver you and set you free. Desire Him! Let's move to that star."

Everyone got up and began to walk towards the star.

Jesus turned to His right and began to walk away.

The chief angel was hovering above the people.

He was watching everyone very carefully.

The angels that surrounded the Christian woman's group, kept guard and kept watching the chief angel.

The candles, flash lights and torches the people had begun to burn out faster than normal.

The temperature was getting bitterly cold.

The air was becoming so thick to the point, the people began to pass out.

The Christian woman, who was very tired, noticed the noise and said, "What is that?"

Some of the people kept walking pass her and the little boy.

Some people said, "We can't breathe and some are passing out."

The Christian woman and the little boy stood looking at the silhouettes of people and children passing by them.

She said, "You just accepted Jesus Christ as Savior; I know you don't know Him yet, but He would not have turned His back on you and left you. Not even now!"

Jesus was looking at the woman and the people, as He was dressing.

Jesus touched her heart.

The Christian woman said, "Lord Jesus, please help us to make this journey. Please ease the burden on our bodies and on our minds. I do not want to lose no one Jesus.

Thank you."

Thumrl and the angels began to blow the breath of life onto the people as Jesus was blowing it to the angels.

The people began to be revived, and sitting on the freezing ground, their energy was increasing.

The Christian woman and the little boy fumbling and stumbling, began to help the people off the ground.

The people began to feel the ground shake.

The Christian woman, bending over and helping the aunt and the baby and a few older people get up, yelled and cried out to the people, "Move fast! I do not know what this is."

She yelled to the little boy, "Get to the star and don't stop."

The little boy shaking said, "Yeah."

The people who were getting off the ground were trying to run and some of them were crawling until they were able to get up.

The angels stepped back and the Christian woman could see the silhouettes of the people with things in their hands running toward the large group and screaming.

The little boy looked back.

He could see faintly from the lights, the very large mob and stood there and was about to run to the woman until one of the last people, an old man, grabbed him by the shoulder and said, "She said for you to run!"

He pulled the little boy along.

The holy angels stepped back.

The woman kneeled.

She knew she could not die, because the rapture had occurred.

She knew the angels told her to get the people to the star.

She prayed and said, "God, please give me your strength to slay and destroy so I can get these new believers to you.

Please! In Jesus' name."

And please remove the fear.

As the people and the evil spirits were within a few feet of her, she said, "You have not given me the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love and a sound mind."

She began to stand firm.

She stood.

She balled up her fists.

Several thousands of people and evil spirits passed her.

The little boy saw them and yelled, "Stop, in Jesus' name!"

They stopped.

The little boy looked up at the old man who was carrying him.

They were shocked and scared.

The little boy told the old man, "Let me down."

The old man dropped the little boy to the ground.

The little boy said, "Ouch," and looked at the man.

The man was perplexed and very afraid.

The little boy, getting off the ground and dusting off his shorts said, "What do we do if they are just tricking us?"

The man said, "Don't know."

The little boy said, "Are they bound forever in Jesus' name?"

The old man, looking around said, "I don't know."

The little boy saw one of the men wiggling and falling back on the ground.

The old man pointed at the wiggling man and said, "He is evil."

The old man was so afraid, he didn't know what to do.

The little boy screamed, "Jesus, Be still you!"

They stopped.

The old man and the little boy looked at each other.

Their fear was being drowned out by the screams and yelling of hoards of people surrounding the woman.

The little boy and old man stood to try and hear what the woman was saying, but they did not hear her only the screams of the evil ones.

The old man pushed the boy and said, "Get to the lights."

The little boy, still was wondering about his friend, moved a step and then said to the old man, "We haven't needed light before."

He turned to run towards the star and a large number of the new believers were standing with them.

The little boy was shocked and gasping with his mouth opened.

An older woman said, "We don't know about her God, Jesus, but we know He won't leave her, nor us."

The little boy said, "She said don't stop."

He pointing said, "We have no time left. We've got to get to the star. Come on!"

He ran through the people, waving for them to follow him.

The old man who had picked up one of the torches, dropped it and said, "The boy is right."

He looked back towards all the screaming and dropping his head, he began to walk fast through the people to catch up with the little boy.

The large group of people began to walk faster, then trot and then they all began to run.

They saw evil spirits all around them and they were screaming the name of Jesus and the evil spirits would run away.

The little boy pointed at the star that was becoming dim and he yelled, "The star!"

The little boy had pushed himself through the rough terrain.

The Christian woman told him to get to the star.

She told him once he accepts Jesus as Lord and Savior and when he reaches the star, he will be taken to join his mother and baby brother.

The Christian woman told him not to let anyone stop him, nor discourage him. Even if he has to hide and run by himself - don't let nobody stop him.

The little boy slowed down and quietly passed through the large group of people.

The Christian woman told the little boy, "Remember, the angels said you have to reach the last star by the time its light goes out. Keep your eyes on the star."

The people who were all around the Christian woman wondered what the Christian woman was whispering in the little boy's ear.

Many kept watching the little boy's silhouette, to make sure they could still see him so they could follow him.

Some looked at the star.

They remembered the Christian woman saying they had to reach the star before the last light on earth goes dark.

The people were picking up speed, because the star was growing dim.

All of a sudden, in an instance, there was a mighty earthquake erupted; molten with glowing heat began to flow, and fire began to spill out blocking the path the people were traveling on.

The people were screaming.

The babies as well as the adults were terrified.
The little boy was screaming louder than anyone else.
But he could hear the Christian woman say, "Move to that star! Run!!!"
She grabbed his hand.
He turned quickly and tried jerking his hand from the person he thought was trying to pull him back.
His little face was full of fear.
He was so afraid, he didn't recognize her.
It took him a minute.
The Christian woman saw a very large angel hovering by a mountain.
He said, "Climb the side of the cliff, quickly!"
The Christian woman was shaking from the thunderous sound of the earthquake and the intense fire of the pit below.
She knew they were at the end.
The woman yelled, "The side of the cliff - hurry!!!"
She didn't wait.
She grabbed the little boy's hand and he grabbed hers and they began to scale the side of the cliff.
The old man was in front of her and the boy.
She looked in amazement of how he could have beaten her to get to the cliff.

She glanced back only once at the huge number of people hugging onto the cliffs.

The passage was very small. They had to place their feet very delicately to keep from falling.

The little boy looked at the Christian woman with such fear.

Then the little boy saw the old man in front of them.

The Christian woman had a puzzled look on her face.

Then her eyes got big with fear as she was looking back at all the people God gave her to bring to Him.

She covered her mouth to keep from screaming.

The little boy was already afraid but turned slowly and he opened his mouth to scream.

The Christian woman took her hand from her mouth and threw it over his mouth and nearly slipped off the cliff into the fiery pit; but her feet were stabilized.

The people looked at her.

They knew it had to be bad.

The Christian woman motioned for them to close their eyes and be still.

The people passed the message along by facial expression.

The woman said, "Dear God, shield us so they cannot see us."

The angels covered the cliff with their massive wings.

The earth and the sky were full of evil beasts trying to locate the remnant.

The people began to smell them.

They had begun to get sick.

The angels blew fresh air on the people to sustain them.

The leader of the evil beasts, who came out of the earthquake, was walking in the fire. He was so big and tall his height reached the cliff.

He stopped and began to smell the air.

The angels watched him and all the evil spirits in the sky and on the earth.

The holy angels also saw the four evil beasts that were chained in the River Euphrates trying to get out.

Gabriel said unto the angels, "Not yet."

Several people, who were screaming, fell into the fiery pit.

The angels looked and they knew these were the ones who openly confessed their sins.

The angels knew they would be destroyed.

The lead evil beast smiled and grunted.

The woman began to shake.

Because she was thinking, "Oh God, I've failed!"

The old man in front of her, touched her arm and said, "You didn't fail."

The Christian woman, even though she was silently talking to God, said to the old man, "I don't remember you."

Then he said, "You know me."

The Christian woman slowly turned her head and looked directly at the old man.

His eyes began to twinkle and he began to change in her presence.

The little boy opened his eyes and saw the old man transformed.

The Christian woman, still feeling guilty about the people who fell into the pit, saw into the angel's eyes - the lives of the ones who fell into the fiery pit, and who they were.

The Christian woman exclaimed, "Gabriel!!!!"

He smiled.

He flew through the valley of the fiery pit and he saw the humans and destroyed the evil beast and beat shut the part of earth that was opened.

He grabbed the evil leader and chained him up and took him away.

All was done in an instance, less than a second.

Gabriel looked at the Christian woman and disappeared.

The Christian woman and little boy seemed to be the only persons who saw all of this.

They both quickly turned their heads and looked at the space in front of them, hoping he was still there.

But Gabriel was not there.

He was standing before Jesus, giving Him a full report and account of what he did.

Jesus was standing wearing a purple robe, tied with a belt full of precious stones.

Jesus said, "Very good Gabriel."

Gabriel bowed and walked away.

The angels continued to shield the people as they hurriedly scaled the cliff.

When the Christian woman and little boy nearly walked off the cliff; they stopped and looked around, but there was no place for them to go.

The little boy was still looking at the star when he saw the last of its light go out.

He began to jump and throw his finger in the air and said, "No star light. What are we to do? I don't see mama and the baby."

The Christian woman said, "God your holy angel said for us to get to the star before its light goes out. We are here Father. Please, please bring us home. God, I want You and Jesus forever, forgive me of all my sins and deliver your remnant."

The chief angel that had been hovering over the way, said to Thumrl, "Prepare the way."

The angels appeared to the people and straightened their bodies.

The people were very afraid of the angels but filled with joy at the same time.

No words had to be spoken.

The people ran and jumped on the backs of the great number of holy angels that were invisible but were with them all the time.

The chief angel was watching everything take place.

The Christian woman who was holding the little boy's hand was still full of grief.

The chief angel went over to her and hovered over her and the little boy.

He looked at the little boy, then the woman.

He said, "You are to leave now - or stay."

The little boy leaped off the cliff into the chief angel's arms.

As he jumped, he snatched the Christian woman's hand to jerk her off the cliff.

The chief angel put the little boy on Thumrl's wings.

The woman he carried his arms.

The little boy was so excited because he was finally going to be with God and his mama and baby brother.

He was on Thumrl's wings on his knees and arms, stretched out looking straight ahead and full of joy and excitement.

The chief angel was surveying all the people, and then he saw something that disturbed him.

The angels sensed it too.

The chief angel put the Christian woman on Thumrl's left wing and flew down to the valley.

He stopped in front of the fifteen year old who was lost in the darkness.

The boy was so scared of this massive angel, he fell on his face and covered his face and screamed.

The chief angel looked with wonderment.

Gabriel spoke to the chief angel and said, "Let him pass. He accepted Jesus as Savior as he was being bitten, beat and chained."

The evil ones fell back and the fifteen year old climbed out of the pit up on the banks and started following the people to the star.

The Christian woman knows.

Bring him home.

All the angels cheered.

The chief angel picked up the boy and flew him to the angel who had his father.

They all rejoiced greatly.

The angels cheered.

Then the entire earth and sky and everything on the earth began to shake violently.

All eyes were on the portion of the sky the great thunderous noise was coming from; even the angels were looking up.

Then suddenly Michael and his legions of holy angels appeared with fierceness unknown to man - with their eyes set to do battle.

The chief angel said, "Let's go."

The angels had formed a massive line and they headed swiftly into the spiritual realm - a zillion times faster than the speed of light.

The angels could hear Michael and his legions of holy angels destroying much evil.

Michael stood and looked down at the evil spirits chained in the River Euphrates.

They were slithering behind each other.

Michael wanted to destroy them at that moment, but he heard the command of God saying to loose them.

The evil spirits were very afraid of Michael and his angels, but their lust to kill off mankind propelled them to hide in the river until Michael left.

As the angels were transporting the people to heaven, Michael and his angels passed the stream of light with speed that could not be measured, even by the angels that were authorized to bring the remnant home.

The angels steadfastly looked ahead at a small light that was becoming large as they passed through sound and light speeds not fathomed by man.

The people were still shaken and frighten by the sheer presence of Michael and his angels.

Many were still screaming and crying.

The aunt spoke in between screams and with trembling lips said, "If I would have known things would be like this, I would have been a Christian."

Some people were laying flat on the angels backs because of the fear they had of the great power and magnitude of Michael and his angels.

The little boy's eyes were steadfast on his expectation to see his mother and baby brother and above all, God.

He was so excited.

He had not moved from Thumrl's wing since the chief angel put him there.

The chief angel was watching the Christian woman who was still absorbed in her short comings and failures.

The chief angel and Thumrl looked at each but kept moving towards the light.

Music, beautiful music greeted them.

As the music floated out into each and every inch of space, it was absorbed into time.

The music was so beautiful, it began to calm the people down.

The chief angel who was hovering by the angels said, "God created music so all creatures can always feel His love for them through each note.

God, who was standing and watching the angels bringing in the remnant, moved away from the window.

God was dressed in a royal blue overhanging robe.

The ties around the neck and sleeves were precious jewels bound together by diamonds and encrusted on gold ribbons.

He had on golden sandals which had all the same precious gems, but there were in a specific design.

He turned and began to walk slowly.

Every inch of space was extremely tall opened windows.

The windows were gold in trimmed.

Armed angels filled the hallway.

They fell in line behind God.

The angels were dressed in white, but everything was trimmed in gold - gold buttons, gold blades in the swords, and gold boots.

Sprinkles of gold covered their clothes.

When God reached the door, two angels on the inside opened the doors and two angels on the outside opened the outer doors.

The angels were standing back to back.

Thereby sealing the entrance to God's throne room.

When God reached the outer door, the arch angels were standing in formation on the porch of the outer court.

They were dressed in all gold.

The outer court was an opened courtyard where God could see all heaven.

Underneath their feet were blue crystals that formed the outer court.

The light of heaven was a billion times greater and brighter than anything that could exist here on earth.

The music was all colors and was floating though the air.

The smells of beauty filled the air (like wildflowers or sweet blossoms in the spring).

Singing; singing was everywhere.

God stood.

The arch angels fell to their knees and bowed their heads and said, "True and Living God. Pure and holy art Thou. He that reigns in righteousness and shows His love forever.

Amen."

Heaven shook under the declaration of the arch angels.

All of heaven fell on their faces and cried, "Amen and Amen!"

The arch angels stood up and surrounded God.

They proceeded down a very long walkway.

All of heaven was out and beautiful flowers were being thrown on the blue crystal pathway before God for Him to walk on it.

Cheers were mounting up in heaven.

The chief angel and the other angels _____.

The chief angel was thinking, thinking, thinking, so was Thumrl and the other angels.

The little boy exclaimed, "A party! They are throwing us a party."

The chief angel did not say anything.

His silence is what caught the Christian woman's attention. She looked at his face and turned to look at Thumrl's face. She said, "A party will lighten anybody's spirit." She didn't get a response and said, "Right," sarcastically. God paused and looked towards the angels with the remnant and continued on His way. Gabriel looked at Michael. The Christian woman could not think. Then suddenly, the chief angel cried, "Let us pass!" The woman looked and saw a very large fence that was pure white and it glistened with gold dust. Nothing else could be seen. The remnant began to stand up and look at the beautiful gate. The angels moved the people off their backs. The people were floating in the air. All the angels moved in front of the giddy (giggling) people. The Christian woman stood still but was cutting her eyes from side to side. The remnant could hear all the rejoicing on the other side. The little boy was flipping and twirling in the air. Others were swimming, leaping in the air.

The aunt walked over next to the Christian woman holding her nephew.

The aunt grinning, looked at the Christian woman and said, "Christian woman, I never asked your name."

The Christian woman watching the angels knew something was wrong.

She began to walk towards the angels.

The aunt made a step with the baby on her hips and said, "Christian woman?"

The Christian woman did not want to say anything because she did not know what was going on, so she answered the aunt and said, "Gloria."

The aunt looked at her as the Christian woman walked towards the angels.

The aunt said, "I got it. Gloria, right?"

Turmbi turned and looked at the Christian woman.

She said, without opening her mouth, "What's wrong?"

The angels moved forward and began to comb every inch of the massive fence.

The chief angel stood back near Thumrl and said to the other angels, "He said it would be here."

God walking down the path, looked outward and smiled, but continued to walk.

The arch angels surrounding God began to think.
God continued to smile.

The glory of God filled all of heaven.
Every being was lining the great street.
They were all dressed in unbelievable colors.
They all wore precious metals and beautiful precious gems.
When God approached them, everyone fell on their face and laid prostrate from the beginning of God's walk to the end of each pathway.

The arch angels surrounded God.
The throne room angels followed behind the arch angels.
God looked toward the enormous gate that surrounded all of heaven and He smiled and continued His walk.

Outside the gate, all of the remnant and angels stood.

They had combed the entire gate.

The main angel, who was over the chief angel and all the rest, stepped forward.

The remnant was shocked, because although they all were quiet, he appeared to be the quietest.

The one that was watching everything, he didn't buckle under Gabriel's presence, nor did he shake at the presence of Michael and his warring angels.

The remnant stopped floating in the air.

They stopped twirling and could not make any thought, or had any idea about who this being was standing next to Thumrl and the chief angel.

He was standing looking at the gate in great amazement. He was wondering until almost to the point of being perplexed.

One of the angels who had scaled the fort as he was sliding down the gate said, "No way!"

The angel who was over all of them said, "He said there is a way in. He made it for them, the remnant, before time began."

Thumrl, looking at the chief angel, nodded his head in agreement.

The head angel, the chief angel and Thumrl turned to the remnant, while the angels were still scaling the way and standing on each other's shoulders, looking for an opening. The Christian woman and the remnant were scare of him and backed back.

As the remnant backed back, the Christian woman's eyes saw something.

The angels scaling the gate looked at her.

The main angel, the chief angel and Thumrl looked at her.

She reached backwards for the little boy's hand.

He rushed to her and was amazed at his speed.

He put his hand in hers.

He looked up at her and said, "I believe in you."

The main angel smiled.

The Christian woman said, "Have your eyes follow the gate up."

The little boy did and so did the rest of the remnant.

They continued until their heads were fully back.

They all screamed.

The main angel turned and said, "Let them pass."

God and the arch angels looked towards the gate.

God stopped walking.

All of the angels stopped.

Gabriel looked at God.

Then thunderous voices in unison belted, "No!"

And all the remnant fell backwards toward space.

Then the main angel exclaimed, "I see it!"

All the angels rushed to him and he pointed it out to them.

The angels were gathering the remnant together.

The main angel bowed before the people and said, "I am Ark2 ^LR."

He said, "I am the angel of the Lord God! He sent me here to make sure you entered into heaven."

All the angels cheered.

God smiled.

He knew they had found the opening.

The only way they could enter into heaven.

It was a very small opening He created when He created heaven because He knew the remnant had to enter and He could not violate His own law.

God and the arch angels continued their walk.

God's personal angel looking at the remnant said, "Don't be frightened."

He turned and looked back at the holy angels that guard heaven.

All around, the height of the angels swallowed them.

There are no words in the human tongue that can calculate the height nor the breadth of the angels.

The angels who protected the gate were fierce in face and stance.

God's personal angel turned to the remnant with the chief angel and Thumrl and said, "We cannot pass them. It is just not possible. But all of you run or fly as fast as you can through there. He turned and pointed at a small space between the toes of one of the giants.

The main angel said, "They are call Wemithes. When God says shut up all the entrances, not one particle of air can pass them. But Jesus made the way for you. Go quickly."

The Christian woman, along with the little boy, walked up to him and stared intensely in his eyes.

The angels had formed a bridge for the remnant to get through.

The woman and the main angel, the chief angel and Thumrl looked at the remnant as they were fleeing through the opening.

The main angel snickered and thought, "Only Jesus can think of that."

Jesus smiled.

The main angel felt Jesus' smirk.

He looked at the Christian woman and said, "You must go now; your time cannot be extended."

The little boy started pulling her.

She said, looking at all of the angels, "What happens to you?"

They did not reply.

The Christian woman looked at the Lord God's angel and said, "Cut off Pharaoh's chariots wheels in the midst of the Red Sea. You don't look that big."

The angel smiled.

Jesus said, "Get them through the opening."

The Lord God's angel said, "We'll talk."

The woman started flying through the space and heard the angels yell, "Fly to the center of the sky and keep going!"

The remnant was in awe by the unbelievable beauty and was stopping.

The Christian woman and little boy flew pass them yelling, "Run, we don't have time!!!"

The remnant began to fly hard.

God had reached the great temple with His angels.

He took his first step.

Jesus dressed in all white with a gold sash about his waist.

He took his first step in unison with God.

The pathway was a thousand steps to the great temple, which was built for the marriage of the Bride of Christ to Jesus.

It was beautiful!

I was constructed of white marble that shone brighter than the sun.

The entire temple was opened and had twelve pillars holding up the roof.

All angels were standing to the left and to the right of the great walkway to the temple.

God and Jesus walked side by side down the center of the steps.

As Jesus was walking, He sensed something, an emptiness. He looked throughout heaven.

He looked throughout eternity.

He began to look around and saw that Thumrl, the chief angel, the main angel and a great number of other angels were missing.

Jesus continued up the steps.

He smiled at the other angels.

Music filled heaven.

Jesus' heart was aching because He did not sense the Christian woman.

God, the Father, said nothing.

He and Jesus stood in the great temple.

The arch angels were on God's right side and the ----- angels were on Jesus' left side.

The angels covered the temple from left to right and right to left.

God's throne room angels and Jesus' throne room angels stood in front of the other angels on the walkway.

They stood from the beginning of the thousand steps to the last step to enter the Wedding Temple.

The beauty of the scene was what God the Father created from the beginning of time.

God gave His Son the most beautiful wedding gift.

This scene of the most absolute beauty that could ever be created in all of eternity.

He created it to show Jesus His love for Him and His bride.

The music was flowing through heaven.

The choirs were singing.

The music formed the foundation.

God and Jesus' anticipation of the Bride of Christ was filling all of heaven.

Then, the Bride appeared at the bottom of the steps.

The eleven disciples were broken down into the lead group.

Three disciples in the front and four on each side forming an "U".

The holy angels cheered when the Bride finally appeared. And the eleven disciples waited to take their first step to ascend to the great temple.

As Jesus and the Father climbed the last step, the Holy Angels began to rotate in their position.

The Holy angels wore blue silk robes encrusted with precious jewels around their necks, waist belts and on the edges of their sleeves. They wore gold sandals and they moved to the edge of the steps.

Then the angels with the white robes speckled with gold and golden neck embroidery, sleeve embroidery in gold and golden beads from the neck to the upper chest and gold sandals.

These angels stood behind the angels of the high court who had on the blue robes.

The angels in blue of the high court knew from Jesus' spirit that angels were missing.

The angels did not know exactly what that meant.

Behind the holy angels whose robes were white speckled with gold, were very tall angels arrayed in white, but had solid gold vestures and they had spears with golden heads.

The holy angels of God's throne room were lined in front of all the angels from the bottom of the step to the top of the steps.

The twenty-four elders were lined from next to God's throne room holy angels on the left to the right.

Twelve from the throne room angels to the arch angels on the left and twelve from the throne room angels to the left of Jesus.

Jesus and God stood in the middle of the great temple.

Angels all over heaven had books.

The books had each person's life, their acceptance of Jesus Christ as the Son of God who came in the flesh to be saved. These books contained each person's crown of life.

These were the books of heart aches and pains.

The books contained each bride member's repentance of sin, deliverance and forgiveness.

The books contained each person's wedding garment.

God said, "Make it according to the pattern in each person's Book of Life."

The music was thunderous when the bride appeared at the first step.

The eleven disciples appeared in a squared "u."

Three disciples were in front and four disciples on each side of the steps.

The angels were marking off names of each member from their books.

Jesus nodded to the angels.

The angels opened the books of heart aches and pains and tossed them into the air.

As the heart aches and pains for each disciple were tossed in the air, they became diamonds and rubies and fell onto the pathway forming an extremely beautiful covering for the disciples as they began their journey.

Peter could hardly contain himself for the extraordinary beauty Jesus had created to show His disciples His love for them and their great favor before Him and God.

The eleven disciples wore the gold crowns upon their heads. Matthew, Mark and Luke were the three disciples who were in front.

Matthew, on the left, wore a purple robe, encrusted with gold and silver. He wore silver slippers.

Mark, positioned between Mathew and Luke, wore an emerald green robe with gold and silver trim with emeralds inlaid in the trim. He wore gold slippers.

Luke, standing on the right side, wore a red robe, trimmed in gold and gold sandals.

Peter was standing behind Mathew, followed by Thomas, John and one of the sons of Zebedee, James.

Peter's face was contorted with his sniffles, thinking of how he denied Jesus.

The other disciples were thinking how they denied Jesus and were disobedient.

Jesus, knowing their thoughts said, "Do not be sorrowful for anything you think you did not do. I tell you I have forgiven all and wrote down everything by my own hands and have changed all sorrow and grief into precious, precious jewels for your sorrow and pain is more precious than you know. I have removed it and now there is nothing but joy and peace."

Thomas began to shout, "Yes, Jesus, yes, thank you!"

The other disciples began to grin and smile at one another. They could see Jesus smiling from inside the great temple.

As the disciples began to step again, in unison, they looked down at the beautiful jewels, and as they stepped, the jewels broke open and brought forth a beautiful fragrance of love and forgiveness as they continued stepping on the stones.

The other four disciples standing to the right were Andrew, John (Zebedee's son), Philip, Thaddeus and Bartholomew. Each of them was arrayed in shades of gold and had gold slippers on.

Their robes were heavily adorned with gold and silver and precious jewels.

The scribe angels were keeping up with each jewel and the tailoring of each garment.

The scribe angels were very busy.

As the eleven disciples began their procession, Paul rounded the corner and began to ascend by himself.

He walked behind of the "U" formation, in the center.

Paul's robe was elaborately decorated.

His robe had all the towns and countries he preached in.

Embroidered on his white robe were all the names of each person he witnessed to.

Every person's name, who accepted Jesus as Lord and Savior, was embroidered on Paul's robe.

Paul wore silver and white sandals with much embroidery and designs that showed all the miles he walked to be obedient to Jesus and the people Jesus saved.

Paul's crown was silver.

David waited for Paul to step ahead.

Then the angels, who were over the wedding, beckoned for the King David to begin.

David was dressed in a white and gold gown.

He wore gold slippers and a royal blue cape.

The cape was encrusted with precious jewels that surrounded the twelve stones, representing the twelve tribes of Israel.

The twelve stones were attached from the hem upward and around the cape, down the other side being encircled with diamonds and, all the other precious stones encrusted from each stone.

David's robe was closed by a gold braided closure.

Six on each side of the robe and the fasteners were made of solid gold.

David wore a gold crown with the twelve stones in front of the crown.

David walked a distance from Paul, but directly behind Paul.

As David began to climb, the fragrance of forgiveness, love and truth continued to fill the atmosphere.

David inhaled all the fragrances of Jesus' love to him.

Then the multitude of the twelve tribes appeared.

The angels cheered.

The father of each tribe appeared.

They each held a stone which represented their tribe.

The tribes appeared.

The multitude, who accepted Jesus as the Son of God and only Savior, appeared and they walked behind the father of their tribe.

Each adored as kings and queens and wearing the stone of their tribes.

Their crowns were simple gold, but the center of each crown was the magnificent stone of their tribe.

The tribe of Levi appeared in the midst of the twelve tribes, lead by Moses and Aaron.

Moses and Aaron were walking next to each other.

Moses had on a white crown and held a white gold box that was adorned all over with white diamonds.

Moses had a white gold robe on and the twelve stones on his chest that represented the twelve tribes of Israel.

Aaron had a long red robe on and gold slippers with red rubies that represented the blood of the lamb.

Aaron's robe had the twelve stones of the twelve tribes of Israel encrusted in gold.

Each stone connected with the gold ribbon, representing the divine nature of God.

Aaron held a gold box which was encrusted with the twelve tribes of Israel stones.

His box held the original oil from the original temple.

Aaron had a gold plate on his chest with the twelve stones of the tribes of Israel.

After the tribe of Levi, the tribes continued to come in order; being lead by the father of each tribe and carrying the stone representing each tribe.

All the prophets of each tribe were behind the father of that tribe.

There was a pause in the procession, until the twelve tribes caught up with the others that had gone before them.

The other members of the bride were standing to the left and to the right of the great stair way, waiting to come forth.

Everyone was wondering why they were waiting.

Jesus was smiling.

Everyone could see Him.

Nations began to be called.

The fathers of each nation proceeded.

The prophets followed the fathers.

Each nation was adorned in majestic splendor.

Each nation, in order, proceeded onto the great stair way.

The holy angels were looking in their many books.

They were quietly talking to each other.

They were watching each person very intensely.

They were watching the jewels each person had.

The angels were watching each crown.

They were watching the colors and the hair, everything.

The all looked at the same time and saw many garments, vestures, shoes and crowns without any wearers.

They held their heads down in sorrow.

But they did not remove any of the garments because God did not tell them to remove any.

Michael looked up in the sky.

Gabriel turned slightly and looked up.

They saw the remnant flying in the sky.
The remnant began to scream and yell, "Wait!!! We are here!!"
Jesus saw them.
God patted Jesus on his right shoulder.
He and Jesus walked out of the great temple and began to descend slowly down the steps.
The bride stood still.
Then God moved his hand.
Michael and Gabriel saw God move his hand.
The remnant dropped out of the sky onto their knees directly before Jesus and God.
The Christian woman was lying prostrate, as the others, before Jesus.
Jesus stepped to the Christian woman and the nail print scars could be seen through the straps of Jesus' sandals.
Jesus looked at the remnant.
The eight year old boy saw God and he ran to God.
God picked him up.
Jesus looked at the little boy.
Some of the remnant was on their knees beholding the Son of God.

Before, Jesus' and God's presence were so bright, the remnant could not see their faces.

The more time the remnant was there, God's and Jesus' faces became more visible so the remnant could see them. The Bride of Christ parted and everyone was looking at the remnant with amazement.

God and Jesus were looking over the remnant.

A scribe walked up to God.

Jesus looked at the scribe as He was bending down to the Christian woman.

The Christian woman was crying and sobbing very heavily. Through her tears, she could only see the scars on Jesus' feet.

She became so sorrowful for being disobedient and not wanting to do His will to go to Africa and tell the people of Jesus.

She was so hurt for the heartache she caused the remnant.

Jesus stooped down, still watching the remnant.

He said to the woman, "Obedience is better than sacrifice.

What a sacrifice! You nearly missed eternity."

The woman began to sob heavily.

The little boy said to God, "I didn't think she would come."

Jesus looked at the little boy.

God said, "I told you she would come."

Jesus looked at God the Father.

God the Father looked at Jesus and said, "I wanted her here in eternity."

Jesus said, "Let the angels in."

The angels instantly appeared, kneeling before God and Jesus.

The scribe angels looked over their books'

They leaned towards God and said, "They are all here and then some."

God looked to his right and an angel appeared, carrying an elaborate wedding gown.

Jesus was looking the woman.

The little boy looking at the elaborate wedding dress, began to point at the dress and looking at God, he exclaimed,

"That's me."

God said, "Yes!"

The little boy said, "That's my mommy and my little brother."

The mother and, brother (who had become a grown man), waved and called his name.

The little boy saw them waving.

As he climbed out of God's arms, he became grown.

God said, "Dress them."

All the garments that were at the bottom of the stairway, the holy angels began to go through the Book of the Remnant and began to dress the people according to what God had written for the garments.

Jesus looked at His holy angels.

God sent for the remnant.

They were concerned about the Christian woman.

Jesus sensed they were concerned.

Jesus leaned towards the Christian woman, who was humbled and crying and He said, "Wedding crasher."

God waved His hand above the large troop of holy angels and they were instantly adorned with new medals and armory.

The angels of heaven began to cheer for the remnant holy angels.

Michael and Gabriel heard a thunderous crash and looked towards the east.

The angels that formed the wall, had turned to face heaven and become a part of the wedding that God had planned forever.

Jesus looked at the Christian woman.

Jesus took the woman by the hand and lifted her up.

The dress instantly was placed on her along with her slippers and crown.

Everyone cheered.

God turned and walked back to the temple.

Jesus took the woman's hand and began to walk to the temple.

The Bride fell in behind them God, Jesus and the Christian woman in their place.

The Bride began to proceed to the great temple.

The little boy, who had become grown, was grinning, walking with his mother and brother.

When everyone was in the great temple, God and the Holy Ghost sealed the Bride of Christ.

And great excitement broke out in heaven, with shouts and cheers.

The shouts and cheers roared through eternity.

The cheers of the Bride and angels went into eternity as praises and worships to the only True and Living God and His son and His Bride, who God had prepared before the foundation of the world.
